Amac Aerospace has delivered its first cabin completion project, a high-end executive outfitting for a Middle East head of state. The A320 is configured with a stateroom and private lavatory/shower and additional staff seating. Entertainment and communications amenities include on-demand audio/video, satcom and wireless local area network. Total completion time was nine months, and according to Amac the airplane was delivered “on time and in budget.” Amac will provide flight support for the airplane.

Amac’s next interior completion project is an Airbus A319. Amac is located at EuroAirport Basel-Mulhouse-Freiburg and employs 210 people. It also provides private aircraft maintenance as well as management and charter.
