Maintenance and interiors specialist AMAC Aerospace has opened a fourth hangar at its base in Basel, Switzerland.

The 7,280m<sup>2</sup> (78,400ft<sup>2</sup>) structure took nearly a year to build, and will be dedicated to widebody maintenance and completions.

AMAC says the hangar is designed to accommodate at least one twin-aisle aircraft, such as a Boeing BBJ 747, 787 or an Airbus ACJ340, along with two narrowbody airliners, such as the ACJ319/320.

Since its launch in 2007, AMAC has grown into the largest privately-owned VIP completions company in the world. Today it occupies 85,000m<sup>2</sup> of space at the EuroAirport site.
